

The MS Society at the Stuart Resource Centre – Social Transport Case Study

Background

With the MS Society bus being off the road, the Stuart Resource Centre approached ACVO looking for a more affordable means of transportation instead of the expensive taxis provided for clients to attend the Centre on a Wednesday.

Assessment

It was becoming very expensive for the MS society to continue to pay taxi fares for wheelchair users coming to the centre but it is often the only time they will see other people.

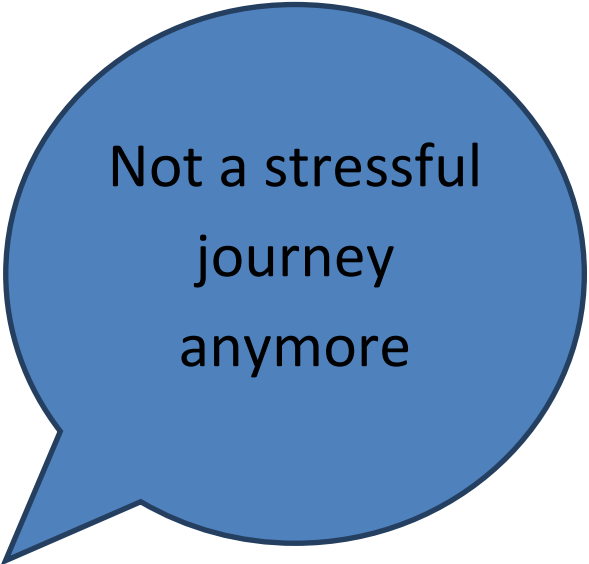

Conclusion

The provision of a reliable and high quality transportation service by Buchan Dial-a-Bus for 3 clients diagnosed with Multiple Sclerosis every Wednesday to the Stuart Resource Centre and back home enables them to attend their Art Class. They enjoy a supportive journey with a professional, friendly and courteous bus driver and the funding of this transportation through ACVO has, and will continue to, significantly alleviate the financial pressure on the Stuart Resource Centre, which is saving in the region of £100 per Wednesday due to this transportation scheme
